DIRECTOR’S MESSAGE

A bedrock for the academic success of students in MBA is their ability to READ extensively. A positive correlation exists between student reading habit and academic performance. I ask every student of MIM to read at least 4 hours each day at home. Their reading list must include classroom notes and chapters of the textbooks, but should not be limited to this. They must also read a newspaper and business magazines, which increases their general knowledge. We’ve procured different kinds of fiction and non-fiction books in our Library. Reading them expands your imagination, social and emotional skills, and gives command over English. Possessing excellent English language skills is essential for one’s success in managerial career. Any shortcomings in productive and effective reading need to be corrected by going through articles available in the Internet that suggest the corrective measures. So, extensive reading is the driver to achieve higher performance for MBA students.
